A Sonnet

Read At the New York City Alumni Dinner, January 3, 1920.

Lord God of Hosts, when low Thy banner trailed,
When over Belgium fair, and fairer France,
We saw Thine enemies' red hordes advance,
It seemed Christ's cross was vain, Thy cause had failed.
The cry from stricken lands and seas death-sailed
We answered as one man, drew virgin lance,
And counting not the cost of war's mischance,
Turned back Thy foes, and high Thy banner scaled!
Yet is our hour of victory betrayed
By little men whose quibbles set at naught
Our sacred pledge to make an end of war.
We stand leaderless, confused, dismayed.
Lord God of Hosts, it was for Thee we fought,
To Thee we cry—"Send us one Prophet more!"

—CAROLINE SCHWEFEL BROWN, '96.

AULD LANG SYNE

Sixty Years Within Sound of the Ohio University Bell

By Mrs. D. J. Evans

The morning chapel service was some times interrupted. In the early days of my knowledge of the institution, the morning chapel was held in the hall of third floor of Central Building. Before this building was remodeled, there were halls running east and west the entire length of the building, and this hall on the third floor was equipped with short pews, placed athwart the room, leaving a narrow aisle by the south wall. The faculty sat on a platform in the east end, and the hour of meeting was 5 o'clock in the morning. The interruptions were caused by cows that had been coaxed the previous night to climb the stairs to the chapel hall. In the Spring of '66 the present Y. W. C. A. room was fitted up for chapel and here the exercises were conducted until the Winter term of 1883-4.

The interruptions here were still worse and more frequent, as either a two-horse carriage would be standing on the platform or a calf with sham spectacles would be, owlshly wise, looking at the students over the pulpit, or about Commencement time, when the grass in the campus was mown, which was done always once a year, the chapel room would be crammed full of the new mown hay, and the doors fastened from within.

Once the pulpit desk was taken away in the night and some days after was found floating in the river. It was no great loss, for it was an insignificant piece of furniture resembling a croquet box standing on end.

At another time the clapper of the bell disappeared, and at another the bell was inverted and filled with pine tar and I recall hearing people denounce this bitterly, as the bell never regained fully its clear and beautiful tones.

The chapel exercises consisted of Scripture reading, a song, and a prayer, and sometimes a word of exhortation or admonition from President Howard. The song was led by some student. There was no instrumental music. The first organ, for use in the college, was bought in 1869, and was purchased with the proceeds of a concert in the Athenium, as the audience room of the public school building was called.

Prof. I. C. O'Kane of Delaware, very prominent in those days as a singer and the author of a number of very popular songs, came to help in the concert. A few years after I discovered that this concert was a far greater event in my life than I dreamed of at the time, as it was at this concert that I especially noticed, while he sang a duet with Prof. O'Kane, him, whose wife I became three years later.

I might digress and say something about the town of Athens as I first remember it. All the dwellings were built close to the sidewalk, or rather where the sidewalk ought to be. The town was small—not more than 1500 inhabitants. South of the college there were three dwellings. On West State above Lancaster Street there were three buildings on the right side and one on the left. The old cemetery was out in the country with a plank walk to it from Main Street. The beautiful part of our city—Sunny Side—had but few houses. It was mostly farming land. West and south of the high school buildings was a bare hillside, but it began building up in '70 with the coming of the Hocking Valley road.

West of South Court Street and south of President Street was owned by Judge Welch, the only dwelling on the block was his home, where Lindley Hall now stands.

The great events of my life during my girlhood years were the college commencements. Probably the exercises made less impression on my mind than the gala dresses which were regarded essential to make the enjoyment of commencement week complete. The exercises were held in the old high school building, the third floor called the Athenium. It was the largest audience room in Athens until '74, when the City Hall was built. And it was a grand sight to see the procession—the brass band, followed by faculty, seniors and other students on their way from the college to the Athenium. The students marched two and two, Philo and Athenian, each with the badge of the literary society to which he belonged, as every student belonged to one or the other. The Philo badge was a white half rosette with long streamers, and the Athenian was a large blue bow, with long streamers, each worn on the left breast.

The first brass band I had ever seen, or heard, was on commencement day, and can even now feel the delectation of that entrancing "Boom-te-a" music of that day. To my childish mind the procession was a wonderful display of what was honored most in our home.

The first commencement exercise in the hall I attended was that of 1858, to see Francis D. Carley graduate, though I had witnessed the processions before.

I recall rather exciting occurrences at commencement time in the early days, especially one, over conferring honors. Up to 1864 two of the Seniors who stood highest in scholarship and deportment received first and second honors. The students at the commencement of '64 believed that the first honors should be conferred on Middleton S. Campbell, who was afterwards a teacher in the Cleveland schools many years. When the class lined up to receive their diplomas, and President Howard was giving Campbell his with only second honor, a large part of the students called out at the top of their voices, "Mid, don't you take it!" - I can imagine now I hear the voice of George W. Boyce above all others saying, "Mid, don't you take it!" And "Mid" didn't take it.

President Howard was so bewildered he sat down and Mr. Campbell came to the edge of the platform, thanked the students, and made a brief speech, explaining his refusal of the diploma. And he never received one from the Ohio University. This terminated the giving of honors at Ohio University.

I feel that my paper would not be complete without a mention of the first lady graduate. My story has been of happenings preceding the admission of girls into the college, which was in 1871. But Margaret Boyd had been attending classes before that, and was a junior the first year of co-education in the institution and graduating in 1873.

The girls were admitted into the university just before my marriage.

CHARLES MANNING WALKER

Class of 1853, Died January 18, 1920.

While the January number of the Bulletin containing a sketch of Charles Manning Walker as our second oldest living graduate was in press, that distinguished journalist passed away. The Indianapolis News with which he was associated at the time of his death paid him high tribute. We quote from its editorial column:

"Charles M. Walker, who died at his home in this city yesterday morning, had the respect of all who knew him, the respect that is always felt for a man of strong character. A hard worker throughout his long life, he was ever conscientious in the performance of his duty. Whatever he was called on to do, he always did to the best of his ability. Mr. Walker had been a member of The News staff since 1904, coming to this paper from the old Journal when its publication was discontinued. He soon won, and held until the end, the affectionate regard of his associates. It is not of his career, which was long and honorable, that they are thinking today, but rather of the gracious and kindly friend, the modest gentleman, the self-effacing worker. No history of Indiana journalism would be complete that did not give large place to Mr. Walker. His was a thoroughly trained, well-stored mind. He wrote clearly and well. His interest in public affairs was keen and intelligent, and his opinions in regard to them were carefully formed and firmly held. He knew intimately many of the men who had played a large part in the history of the nation, and enjoyed their confidence and friendship. His loyalty to his task, whatever it was, was complete and absolute. He felt that after he had done all that he could, he had not done enough. It is pleasant to know that he was happy in his connection with this paper. Those who were privileged to work with him will always remember him as a friend, as one who faced life and its duties bravely, and who was always hopeful and cheerful. He was considerate of others, and of himself last of all. A good and true man has gone to his reward, leaving behind him a memory that will be cherished by all who knew him."

The same issue of The News contained an account of the friendship between Mr. Walker and the poet, James Whitcomb Riley:

"Out of relations on the old Indianapolis Journal there grew a cordial friendship between James Whitcomb Riley and Charles M. Walker, the veteran newspaper man who died Sunday. Among the things treasured by Mr. Walker was a note from Edmund Eitel, nephew of the poet, written November 1, 1912, saying:

"Mr. Riley wants you to know of his appreciation for your birthday letter to him, for you are his best friend. He recalled to me today the Journal days and he says you were the first man to size 'An Old Sweetheart of Mine.' His message is: 'Tell him I remember everything and I owe him all loyalty and affection.'"

"The following tribute in verse was published on the eighty-first birthday anniversary of Mr. Walker:

Christmas Greetings

(To Charles M. Walker on his birthday, Christmas, 1915.)

'O brother mine of birth divine,
Upon this natal day of thine,
Bear with our stress of happiness,
Nor count our reverence the less,
Because, with glee and jubilee,
Our hearts go singing up to thee."
—James Whitcomb Riley."

Mr. Walker was buried in Indianapolis. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Frank O. Ballard, '73, a nephew. Mr. Walker himself was a nephew of Bishop Ames of the Methodist Church.

A college is something more than brick and mortar and test tubes and microscopes, important as they in themselves are. He who has gone through school with his eyes fixed on these things alone has not "chosen the better part."

OUR MAIL BOX

I. M. FOSTER, '95

Washington, D. C.

"I am glad you secured President Parsons of Marietta, to give the Founders' Day address. From what one can hear of him, he ought to be good."

ALEXANDER C. KERR, '16

London, England.

"The receipt of the Ohio University Bulletin containing names and scenes so familiar to me urges me to write immediately and enclose a contribution for Alumni work. I am glad to know that an active and strong Alumni Association is already under way at Ohio University, and I am confident that it will prove of inestimable value to the university, our Alma Mater.

"My best wishes are extended to President Ellis, to all the faculty and to all my friends of Athens."

WILLIS BOUGHTON,

(Former professor of English Ohio University, Brooklyn, N. Y.)

"Your letter of the 6th reminded me of my promise to send you a copy of the poem. I am inclosing it.

"The Ohio Reunion was a success. It made me feel twenty years younger to meet the men and women whom I had known twenty years ago.

"Remember me to Dr. Wilson and such others as knew me."

MARY McCULLOCH, '16,

Point Pleasant, W. Va.

"Find enclosed the annual membership fee. I am very much interested in your work of reorganization of the alumni and send my best wishes for its success. The Bulletins are splendid and bring back many pleasant recollections of old Ohio University."

S. G. LEHMAN, '15,

West Raleigh, N. C.

"I wish to say that I am glad to receive the Alumni Bulletin. Each copy is read at the first opportunity. The first number brought me a surprise. Mr. M. W. Hensel, who graduated before I entered kindergarten, is located here. Mr. Hensel and I have offices in the same building. We had talked with each other often, but did not know that both were graduates of Ohio University, until we received our first copy of the Alumni Bulletin.

"Enclosed herewith you will find my contribution to the Alumni Bulletin."

ETHEL M. McCARLEY, '15

Bidwell, Ohio

"Please find enclosed a check for membership in the Ohio University Alumni Association.

"Although I spent only one year at the Ohio University, it was one of the most pleasant I ever experienced."

WILLIAM R. ANDERSON, '15

Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Your letter addressed to our president, Dr. McNaugher, was turned over to me and I take pleasure in informing you of my whereabouts. I was in the United States Army for seventeen months and after the armistice was honorably discharged and am now finishing my theological course in the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, located at Pittsburgh. Upon my graduation I expect to take charge of the Le Claire Prairie Church, located at LeClaire, Iowa, R. F. D. This will be about the first of June, so up until that date my address will be as stated above.

"I hear frequently of the doings at Ohio University, and it gives me a real thrill of delight that the Alma Mater is still spreading knowledge along the way.

"Hoping this information may aid you in your office as Alumni secretary and wishing for you the most prosperous year in the history of the university, I am—"

CHARLES T. EAKIN, '15

Duquesne, Pa.

"Am enclosing a small check as my contribution to the Alumni Association fund. Three copies of the Ohio University Bulletin have found their way to me and they were certainly read with eager interest. I rejoiced to learn that we are to have the little newsletters from Ohio University and the Alumni."

MAY TEMPLER, '14

Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio

"I want to express my pleasure at receiving the Alumni Bulletin. It was as welcome as the return of an old friend. May it continue to thrive. Enclosed you will find a small contribution to help along the good work.

"I am still teaching English at Cuyahoga Falls High School. I find it a very pleasant place to work. Majel Lawrence comes to us to teach Latin and English at the beginning of this next semester.

"I was very glad to see the Green and White come to our reading table this week. Quite a number of colleges do keep their periodicals on our table and I feel that our college paper will gain friends for Ohio University."

H. M. McLAUGHLIN, '14

Ames, Iowa

"Enclosed you will find my check for membership in the Ohio University Alumni Association. Keep the good work going. You can not realize how much every alumnus appreciates your work."

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

If the Alumni hope to accomplish anything tangible for the Ohio University, it will be necessary to establish and maintain a strong, effective organization. This can only be done by every Alumnus becoming a member of the association. The policy of the officers is to bring this about at once before anything else is done. The hope is that within a short time the number of graduates who have not enlisted as members will be a negligible one. Let each Alumnus take this as a personal appeal to himself to "come across."

The second requisite for an efficient organization is a sufficient fund with which to carry on its work. In this connection, a word concerning the arrangements made with the university authorities is necessary. To begin with, your secretary serves without salary; the work of directing the Alumni department is additional to his duties in the chair of History in the Arts College. The salary of the assistant secretary is met by the university, together with a budget of three hundred dollars for office expenses for the first year. The other expenses, including the printing of the Bulletin, are to be met by the General Association.

There is a decided feeling among the Alumni that the association should be made self-supporting as soon as possible. There is no question but what this can be done and quite efficiently if the Alumni show the proper spirit and interest.

The constitution of the association provides an annual membership fee of one dollar. This is entirely too low when compared with other institutions of equal rank with the Ohio University. Besides, that amount did not include the Alumni Bulletin, which is now sent to all Alumni whose correct addresses we have, whether they are members of the association or not.

The officers have asked prospective members to add to the regular fee such amount as they feel disposed to give as an earnest of their interest. This request has met with generous response, as can be seen by looking over the membership roll. The sums given have ranged from one dollar to five, and the hope is entertained that some day some Alumnus can see ten dollars or even more in the building up of a strong organization.

The January number of the Bulletin contained four more pages than usual because of the amount of material there was on hand. The number of copies to be printed is increasing at the rate of about one hundred a month. In our campaign for membership, which is very flattering and satisfactory, we feel that we have hardly scraped the surface of our prospects. Let us by commencement day in June have an amount in the treasury which will insure not only the publication of the Bulletin, but also the entire expenses of the association for next year. It can be done and that easily if everyone comes across, and it will not be a burden to anyone. Let us do it now and then go on to something else.

If Alumni lack in proper appreciation of their Alma Mater, it can not be charged to lack of feeling or gratitude on their part. The fault lies in a different direction. Nine times out of ten it rests with the college itself.

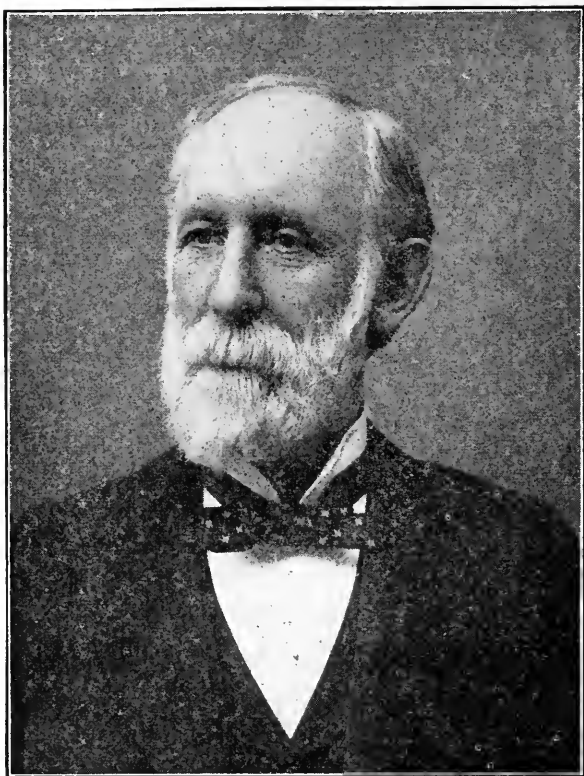

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

HON. I. M. FOSTER,
Class of 1895.

A loyal Alumnus, an untiring worker, interested in everything that concerns his Alma Mater. Mr. Foster now represents the Tenth Ohio District in Congress, and he has many friends who think he could fill the Ohio gubernatorial chair. Well, of course! Ohio University has furnished several governors for Ohio and other states, and why not again?

Ex-President WILLIAM H. SCOTT, of the Class of 1862.

The only Alumnus who was ever president of Ohio University. He will be one of the Founders' Day speakers.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT?

This is not an S. O. S. call. Ohio Alumni are responding beautifully in becoming members of the Alumni Association. But is it too much to expect a one hundred per cent membership?

Is any one sorry that he has become a member of the association? If so, will he kindly write and tell why?

If you have not yet become a member, will you give the reason? Are you too poor or aren't you interested, or don't you like the way we are doing things, or don't you like the secretary personally, or are you out of sorts with any one else on the campus? Please tell us.

OHIO UNIVERSITY CRADLE ROLL

Class of 1942

Clara Belle Howe, born February 10, 1919. Her mother is Mrs. Cora Love Howe, El. Ed. 1909.

Eleanor Margaret arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Alderman, Madison, Wis., on January 24, 1920. Weight eight and one-half pounds.

James Mortimer Cotton, son of Thomas Cotton and Mabel Stewart Cotton (Mus. '11). Born Sunday, January 25, 1920.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Dickerson, 1654 Lincoln Avenue, Lakewood, Ohio.

Gertrude Elizabeth Dickerson, January 7, 1920.

DE ALUMNIS

'94—S. K. Mardis has been invited to serve on a sub-committee at the National Conference on Rural School Consolidation, to be held at Cedar Falls, Iowa, February 17-19. The invitation comes from the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C.

'11—Lillian Cronacher Murdock lives at Ironton, Ohio, from where she sends good wishes to former classmates and encouragement for the Bulletin.

'11—Charles H. Bryson has been employed as secretary-manager of the Athens Chamber of Commerce. He already fills the position of secretary of the Federated Boards of Trade of Southeastern Ohio. He is a busy man with both positions on his hands. Mr. Bryson was at one time Alumni secretary of Ohio University.

'12—It's now Major Joseph H. Comstock of the officers' reserve corps of the United States Army, if you please Major Comstock has proven himself a valuable army man as well as a sound school man.

In the Spanish-American War, when not much more than a boy, he enlisted as a private. From a country school-room of Holmes county he came to Ohio University and remained until he graduated. Then he became principal of the Athens High School. When America went into the World War, he resigned and entered Fort Benjamin Harrison, receiving his commission as Captain. He did duty in various camps and must have been successful, as his recent commission implies.

'13—John G. Case, Jr., is connected with the Continental Casualty Company of Chicago, as general agent with headquarters at Columbus, Ohio.

'16—Eliza M. Allison sends from Niles, Ohio, her good wishes to Ohio University and incidentally her membership fee.

'16—Clarence C. Liggett has left Cincinnati and gone to Cleveland, where he can be reached at 5927 Euclid Avenue.

'17 (A. M.)—At a recent meeting of the Gallia County Bar Association Judge Roscoe J. Mauck, present Common Pleas Judge of that County, was unanimously endorsed for the nomination of judge of the Court of Appeals. Well, of course. Why not? This court in this district belongs to Ohio University anyway. Two of the present judges, Edward Sayre, '11, and Festus Walters are O. U. boys of long ago. At one time when Judge T. A. Jones, '81, was on that bench, they were all from this campus.

Judge Mauck is one of the good lawyers of Ohio, and his career at the bar and on the bench has been a creditable one. So Roscoe, here's to you!

'17—Edytha L. Trickett teaches at Bedford, Ohio.

'18—Virgil C. Dougan has the position of principal of the Swanton High School, where he says he is enjoying his work. He writes: "Please don't let me miss a single number of the Bulletin."

SOME EX- O. U. FOLKS

In a letter received from Congressman Foster we quote the following concerning some one-time students who were favorably known about the campus and on Athens streets:

"A young man appeared at my offices today who attended Ohio University a short time, and will be remembered by some as a good end on our football team. He is James A. Lyon, major in the Medical Corps at the attending surgeon's office in Washington, D. C. His address is 1106 Connecticut Avenue. He is very prosperous and attached to the regular army.

"He also informed me that John Longwell is coaching the football team at the University of the City of New York. Jack Longwell will be remembered as an exceptionally strong football player who was at Athens a short while and was elected captain of the football team, but left college before serving as captain, and went to the University of Pennsylvania, where he played halfback two years.

"These two boys came to Ohio University with Terry Sullivan from New York State.

"Major Lyons wishes to be remembered to his acquaintances at Athens, and wishes to keep in touch with the University."

KEEPING THE HOME FIRES BURNING

FOUNDERS' DAY

Preparations for the celebration of our first Founders' Day are moving along quite satisfactorily. The response from Alumni has been most generous, the prospects are gratifying and the hope is that a goodly number of the Alumni will make arrangements to be present. The students have caught the spirit and the purpose of the occasion and are looking forward to the day with much interest. The faculty, likewise, approves of the plan and is heartily co-operating in making the exercises a great success.

Certainly it is a matter of satisfaction to know that the Speakers' Committee has secured President Edward S. Parsons of Marietta College, to deliver the principal address. President Parsons, our neighbor, has recently come amongst us and so we welcome him by asking him to come with the Founders' Day message. His acceptance indicates a desire to be neighborly. Ohio University and Marietta in their beginnings had much in common. They were both children of the New England spirit and both have served well the children and the children's children of their common ancestry. Certainly it is fitting that the new president of the one college should bring to the other institution the message of the day.

The program will begin on Tuesday evening, February 17th, with an informal dinner for Alumni, Faculty members and University seniors. Those expecting to attend this function will please notify the secretary's office as soon as possible the number of reservations required. Hon. I. M. Foster will be toastmaster.

For Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock the following order of exercises have been arranged:

	Orchestra
Prayer	Ex-President C. W. Super
Opening Remarks, and Introduction of Alumni President
	President Alston Ellis
	Judge D. H. Thomas, '96
	Presiding
Address Representing Alumni
	Ex-President W. H. Scott, '62
	Glee Club
Founders' Day Address
	President Edward S. Parsons, Marietta College.
	Glee Club

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock an illustrated lecture will be given, showing the history of the university by Dr. W. F. Copeland and the Alumni secretary. The lateness of the hour is caused by the desire to use the lantern, and there being no way to darken the room.

On Wednesday evening the Department of Public Speaking, under the direction of Prof. W. H. Cooper, head of that department, will present the "Merchant of Venice." Reserved seats can be secured for this also by notifying the office.

All visiting Alumni will be entertained by resident Alumni during their stay in Athens.

All visiting Alumni will be met at the station by a local Alumni Committee and taken to lodging places.

It is essential for out-of-town Alumni to notify the office of their intention to be present, that adequate arrangements may be made.

Other colleges have Founders' Day. Why not Ohio University?

ALUMNI ACTIVITIES

Do not forget the Chicago Alumni Dinner on Saturday, March 27, at the Hotel LaSalle. Frank M. Kurtz, '10, is master of ceremonies. Write him at 231 Insurance Exchange Building, Chicago, and tell him you are coming.

ABOUT THE CAMPUS

Ohio was well represented at the recent Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions at Des Moines. Dean Voigt headed the delegation. From the reports coming back, it was a great meeting. The returned delegates are full of enthusiasm over the subject and the service rendered by them to the student body in the various meetings can not fail to make a strong impression on the religious life of the campus.

This is mentioned to satisfy and assure our Alumni that we have at Ohio University men and women who are positive factors in such uplift movements.

It will be of especial interest to Columbus Alumni to know that the Ohio University Girls' Glee Club will give a concert in the ballroom of the Hotel Deshler on the evening of Washington's birthday.

OHIO UNIVERSITY BULLETIN

There would be no use trying to disguise the fact that the students of Ohio University are putting out one of the best college papers to be found anywhere. Some Alumni no doubt recall their newspaper experience during college days and hence can sympathize with a staff which attempts what always is a more or less hazardous enterprise. Be it said for the Green and White managers for this year that they are actually giving to the students and Alumni of Ohio University, a real first-class publication with snappy stuff all the way through. The Green and White for 1919-20 occupies the first row of seats among college student publications.

The question whether "to be or not to be" a Treaty and a League of Nations was voted on in the intercollegiate contest at Ohio at a recent convocation. The vote resulted as follows:

Faculty:
For treaty without amendments.....	39
Against Treaty	0
Treaty with Lodge amendments.....	9
For treaty with mild reservations.....	29
Student body:
For Treaty	318
Against Treaty	28
Treaty with Lodge amendments.....	143
Treaty with mild reservations.....	163

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

James Lewis Morrill is the newly elected Alumni secretary of Ohio State University.

Yale Alumni are raising $150,000 to erect a War Memorial to those students of Yale who gave up their lives during the World War.

The Yale Alumni University Fund Association has collected during the past year $640,723.47. During its entire existence, it has raised over three million dollars.

Ohio State University is contemplating a mighty home-coming next June on the occasion of the semi-centennial of its founding.

Indian a University observed Founders' Day, January 20. President Schurman of Cornell, delivered the principal address. Next June a pageant will be staged, showing the history and growth of the university. At that time Gen. Leonard Wood will be the chief speaker.

At this writing President Ellis is confined to his home with a severe attack of "grippe."

Do not forget the date—February 18th.

Founders' Day is intended to boost Ohio University.

If there is no such thing as Ohio University spirit, let us get busy and manufacture some. There are no prohibitory laws on that score.

To train loyal Alumni, it must be done in the college itself. It can not be postponed till after graduation.
